RAN away from the subscribers, living in Somerset county, state of Maryland, on the 26th of December last, two Negro Men; George and Randel—George is about six feet high, twenty-two years of age, and of a yellow complexion—had on when he went away a dark cloth coat, kersey breeches and white yarn stockings; he is a pretty good player on the fiddle.—Randel is about five feet two inches high, twenty years of age, and of a yellow complexion, has a loud hoarse voice, and is a good deal bow-legged; he pretends to be something of a cobbler;—had on when he went away, a fustian coat, home-made kersey breeches and white yarn stockings. The situation of these Lots in a very elevated and improving part of the city, renders them an object highly worthy of the attention of those who are desirous of building.

Sales at Auction.

On Saturday the 20th April, at 2 o'clock P. M. on the premises,

Sundry Building and Garden Lots,

Some of them contigious to, and others at a small distance from the city, containing from about one quarter of an acre to about four acres each. The small lots front on Vine and Callowhill Streets, near Schuylkill—the large lots front on the south side of Francis Street, on the east side of Schuylkill river, on the west side of Schuylkill, second street, and on intermediate streets—the whole containing about 140 acres, being part of the tract known by the name of Springettsbury.

The situation of many of the lots is on high ground, commanding views of the Schuylkill, and supposed to be so much detached from the built parts of the city, as to be out of danger in case of an unhappy return of the fever.

Maps shewing the division of the ground, may be seen at the Coffee-house, at Ogden's tavern in Chesnut-street, at Sybert's tavern in the Nothern Liberties, and at the Middle and Upper Ferries on Schuylkill.

The abundance of stone, for building, on part of the ground, will prove very advantageous to purchasers, as it is proposed to sell at the same time those large quarries on the east side of the Schuylkill, near and above the bridge.

The terms will be cash for the lots of 49 1-2 and 50 feet front, and for those of a larger size one half cash immediately, and the other half to be paid in six months from the day of sale.

One Hundred Dollars Reward.

RAN away from the Subscriber, on Tuesday the second of this inst. April, living in Kent county, Maryland, near Chester Town, the following described Negroes, viz. William, about 5 feet 5 or 6 inches high, a yellowish complexioned fellow, about thirty years of age, formerly the property of doctor William Matthews, he has been very much given to running away, and has been so often described in the public papers within this twelve months that any further description of him seems needless.—Jacob, about 6 feet high, and about 32 years of age, of a common Negroe complection, down look, his little finger of his left hand stands straight, occasioned by the cut of a sickle. Patt, the wife of said Jacob, about 27 years of age, a small light made woman of a yellowish complection, with thick lips for an American of her stature, she is a very good needle woman, and spins on either small or great wheel, and is very handy in any common house work.—Two children of the said Jacob's and Patt's, the one a male child about four years old, the other a female child about two years old. The above described Negroes took with them, besides their own wearing apparel, three coats, two of which were linsey cloth of a light grey color, both new; one of the two was a great deal too large for either of the said fellows; the other coat of brown cloth, half worn; three under jackets, one a velvet, another a drab, the other a light colored linsey cloth do, one new pair of Calf skin shoes, lined with linnen and bound with leather, one pair of boots remarkably large in the legs, several pairs of stockings and a silver watch, all stolen: their own wearing apparel as follows—William had on a light horse regimental coat worked with silver twist, (which coat he had when he was brought home to me the first of February last, a round sailor jacket (blue,) thickset breeches, patched with corduroy in the stride, with other necessary clothing. Jacob, two linsey cloth coatees, lead colored, one new the other half worn, blue linsey cloth jacket, half worn, two pairs of linsey cloth trowsers, of a lead colour, the one new the other half worn, tolerable good shoes and stockings. Patt has every day cloathing, and her children wore home-made linen and linsey, her other cloathing not so well known; it is uncertain which course they may take, as William is such an experienced coaster.

Any person or persons apprehending said negroes or founding them, so that their master may get them again, shall be entitled to the above reward, or in proportion for either of them, that is to say, 40 dollars for each of the fellows, and twenty dollars for the wench and children, and if brought home, all reasonable charges paid by

VERSES
ON THE APPROACH OF SPRING.
BY THE SCOTS IRISHMAN.

NOW frosty Winter slips the grip,
And bonie Spring comes saftly on,
Like a young widow, just gat quit
O' her auld, drowsy, feckless drone.

As yet, she maun her black weeds wear,
An' vent her grief in wind an' rain,
But, by an' bye, in green attire
She'll skip an' dance out oure the plain.

Invited by the saften'd breeze,
Already in the leafless grove,
The birdies whittle on the trees,
An' tell their wee big tails o' love.

The wild wood-pidgeons fly in rings;
The moanin' turtle woos his mate,
An' wild-geese pass on sounding wings
To shun the south'ren Simmer's heat,

But whare's the Lark upo' the lawn,
The Sangster o' my native plain?—
This is thy season, Bird o' dawn!
But ah! whare is thy matin strain?

Ilk morn, up frae the daisy's side,
Where, cow'rin' on the grass, thou lay,
Thou risest not to charm thy bride,
An' hail wi' sang the coming day.

Close mem'ry broodin' owre her store,
By fancy fir'd, at thy sweet name,
Brings to my mind the days o' yore,
A sadly—pleasing, tender train.

I see the dark-brown heathry hills,
I see the haughs wi' grass owre-spread.
I hear the murm'ring o' the rills,
An' hear thee warblin' owre my head.

The fields now green wi' aiten craps;
The Sea, that rows wi' caesless roar;
The snaw-capt mountains far seen taps;
The deep-indented rocky shore—

O scenes! to mem'ry ever dear,
While recollection's power indures,
Where Care was not, wi' brow severe,
But joy led on life's youthfu' hours.

There still, sweet minstrel! thou dost sing;
There by the daisy still dost rest;
There woos thy mate with flutt'rin' wing,
An' feels love's raptures in thy breast.

While I, far owre th' Atlantic's wave,
A thoughtless multitude amang,
Frae mad Democracy to save,
Pour out my unavailing Sang.

ITALIAN FATHER,
A Comedy of Five Acts.

As the stage has of late produced some pictures of domestic infelicity, which have gone home to the hearts of people in general, and have attracted a more than common degree of public attention, it is presumed that some account of the play of the Italian Father, will be interesting to the greater number of your readers.

The author appears to have formed the benevolent intention of pointing out the evils which flow from the contrary views and passions which arise in the breasts of parents and children on the momentous subject of Matrimony, of teaching how to prevent, or if too late to prevent, how to remedy them.

This play represents, principally in action, the story of a daughter, who being denied the hand of the man of her heart, rashly deserts her father's roof and is involved in every species of wretchedness, save that which flows from depravity and habitual vice: and of a father, who, having counteracted his daughter's inclinations, on seeing her fly to the arms of him to whom she was refused, shuts his doors and his heart against her, loads her with his curse, and strives, as far as nature will permit, to banish the remembrance of her tenderness, love and virtue, from his mind. The gentleman who has thus unhappily separated father and daughter, filled with rage against the father, delays to make the daughter legally his wife, until the affair coming to the knowledge of the duke of Milan (whose officer he is) he compels him to marry her, and deprives him of his public employments.

Four years after the last transaction, the drama commences, and presents the daughter as petitioning the son-in-law and heir of the duke, in behalf her husband, formerly his companion, but now in prison for a tavern outrage; she being reduced to the extremities of poverty and wretchedness. A short extract will give an idea of this daughter.

Hippolito. (The heir to Milan) you are Michael Brazzo's daughter.

Astrabel. I once did call him father, he me daughter, that time is long since past. In speaking this I but recal my shame.

Hip. He lives in the neighborhood.

Astr. Yes, my good Lord. But such foul spots stick upon the once fair front of my good name, that Michael Brazzo now remembers not he had a daughter.

Hip. Yet hath he no more children. What does he for you.

Astr. All he should. When children start from duty, parents may swerve from love. He nothing does, for nothing I desire.

In an accidental interview with the father, Hippolito revives his tenderness by asserting his daughter is dead. An extract will give you a better idea than can be conveyed by any other mode.

"Is she dead! well, well. I am glad the world has lost one of its idols. No drunken reveller will now at midnight beat at her doors. Its well. She will sleep now, and in her grave sleep all my shame and her own, and all my sorrows, and all her sins."

Hippolito, however, soon undeceives him and acquaints him with the real situation of his daughter and her husband, upon which his rage appears kindled anew against them: but upon being left alone, his tenderness returns and he determines to see them in a borrowed shape.

"I will go to her. She shall drink of my health, as beggars do of the stream running by the high way, nor think of the source whence it flows.

In the second act, Biraldo, the husband of the seduced daughter, makes his appearance as just released from prison through the influence of Hippolito. The character of Biraldo is strongly marked The man of high spirit and quick feeling, conscious of the injustice of the world and flying to wine and dice for relief, contrary to his better sense. Soon after his arrival at his own wretched dwelling, comes the father in disguise and offers himself as the discarded sewing man of old Michael Brazzo, (himself) This scene between the father, the husband and daughter cannot be analyzed without employing many more words than the scene contains and a knowledge of nature equal to that possessed by the author. A few extracts may serve to keep up the train of ideas necessary in an essay of this kind.

Brazzo. Gentlewoman, the last man I served was your father.

Astrabel. My father? any tongue that speaks his name speaks music to my heart. Welcome old man! Thou good old man! (for such I am sure thou art)—How does my father? lives he? has he health? how does my father? I so much have shamed him, so much do wound him, that I scarce dare speak the name of father.

The father is delighted with the proofs of his daughter's love and many virtues, but tormented with the thought, that she was equally lovely before her fall from him, and wishing for proofs of her ability to withstand temptation, he defers his acknowledgment of her, and prevails upon Hippolito to tempt her with offers of illicit love and riches;—the prosecution of this plot involves all the parties in jealousies and difficulties. The father, convinced of the weakness and infidelity of his daughter, experiences anguish tenfold more poignant than ever, and accuses himself as the cause of all her sorrows and her sins. The husband is tormented with jealousy, and filled with rage against his friend Hippolito. And Hippolito finds himself involved in domestic trouble, through the jealousy of his lady, and in a serious quarrel with Baralda. These difficulties are all cleared up by an expedient flowing from the circumstances of the parties in the most natural manner, and the father hastens once more to see and hear his daughter, now cleared from all suspicion, still continuing his disguise. As this is the finest scene in the piece, we shall give a copious extract, and leave the reader to form his own opinion of the merits of the play by the feelings this scene may excite.

Astr. Art thou again restored to his favor?

Braz. He soon forgave me.

Astr. My father can forgive then!

Braz. Yes, by my troth.

Astr. Any one but a daughter.

Braz. Aye, so I told him.

Astr. How?

Braz. I made truth's lightenings flash before his face, until he wink'd again. I bared his old heart naked to his view till his eyes wept blood for tears.

She expresses her regret at causing her father pain.

Braz. Troth, mistress, it was for his sake as well as yours that I did it—for I cannot but hope that you may yet see many happy hours by his easy chair, and that he may yet rest his old head on your lap.

Astr. Blessed picture!

Braz. And expire his last sigh on your bosom.

He talks of her father's asking her forgiveness, and she reproves him thus:

Astr. Forgive my father! O, heaven knows, I never suffered a thought to harbour here that might have led to murmuring against him. No, through pain, sickness and poverty, my prayers have been to heaven to grant him health, and me once more his blessing.——And during—during the short period that it pleased heaven to permit that I should be a mother, I regretted that my child knew not a grandsire's fondness, but I murmured not. When I have seen old men delighted with the infantine smiles o their children's children, I pictured to my-self my babe on the knee of his happy grandsire, and wished such pleasure to my father, and dropped a tear on the child's face, as the picture gave place to reality—yet I murmured not. And when, when perhaps for want of that aid which the rich can command, the pretty babe died in my arms, I thought of my father—but it was only to bless him!

These extracts (as far as such detached pieces can do it) will give an idea of the powerful manner in which this play interests the feelings. The finest scenes in which Beraldo is engaged, we have not noticed. Neither will we undertake to give an account of the comic under-plot which, as in the Stranger, runs through and diversifies the whole.

Remarkable instance of Longevity.

On Monday last departed this life, Mrs. ELIZABETH BOCKENHOVEN, of the last century—one of the oldest inhabitants of this city, of which she was a native. She was born 20th July, 1699, so that she had nearly completed her hundreth year; and was the third of fourteen children of Abraham Van Gelder, of whom now remain none except the youngest (who bears the father's name) is in his 84th year, and enjoys a remarkable share of health. The name of the old lady, acquired by marriage, is now become totally extinct by her death, having long since lost her sons.

BOSTON, MARCH 26.

ARREST OF AN ITINERANT JACOBIN.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Andover, dated 23d of March, to his friend in this town.

"A transient person, who calls himself by the name of Brown, was sent from this place yesterday, to be committed to the goal in Salem, for seditious practices.

A number of manuscripts were found upon him, judged to be calculated to excite the people to insurrection.

Thhough Brown is not wanting in understanding, there is reason to believe many of the materials were furnished by abler heads than his.

In these manuscripts, the officers of government, the Clergy and Lawyers universally are represented as the enemies of the people; as having consumed a large portion of their property; endeavoring to engross the remainder and to reduce the people to abject slavery.

The bankholders and stockholders are marked for victims of public resentment.

The merchants and people of property partake of the obloquy.

The main object of the writings is to alarm the Farmers, Mechanics and Laborers, with an apprehension, that the preservation of their liberty and property depends on a thorough revolution.

Brown is a man of great fluency and equal effrontery.

The manuscripts abound with calumny, virulence and art. He says they are his own composition; that he has been in nineteen different states and kingdoms in Europe, and in nearly all the United States. He professes to know the sentiments of many of the people in eighty of the towns in this commonwealth; mentions Attleborough, Bridgwater, Concord, Dracut and Methuen, among the towns he has visited; and he says he has had access to the public records in the several states, from which he pretends to have taken many of his documents.

Another traveller, supposed to be employed on a similar errand, I am informed, has repeatedly passed through this town in the course of the past winter, from Boston into the district of Maine.

It is expected that vigorous exertions will be made, by the disaffected to government, to produce an essential change in the executive and legislative departments of this commonwealth, at the approaching elections, as the most eligible measure to accomplish the end proposed. If this should fail, more serious measures may be attempted."

TRENTON, APRIL 8.

The revision of the statute law of New Jersey, is nearly compleated, after six years labor under the direction of Judge Paterson. The talents and the patriotism of this gentleman, have been properly appreciated by the Legislature of New-Jersey: he has executed the task with ability and fidelity; but unless the Legislature will compleat the good work of reformation, by obtaining amendments of the constitution all that has been done, or can be done, is no more than paper and packthread. This code will neither be permanent nor useful, until a new constitution shall give efficacy to the jurisprudence of the country, by the formation of a judiciary, which, from its independence, ability and virtue, is calculated to secure persons and property against the ignorance, partiality, and procrastinations of the present system.

Whilst other states have been new modelling their forms of government, and by separating the legislative from the executive and judicial depatments, erecting barriers against tyranny and all the confusions which arise from a consolidation of powers, the state of New-Jersey is enduring, until this day a constitution which disgraces her citizens, and exposes life, liberty and property, to the most palpable abuses.

There is not now in New-Jersey, one single tribunal entrusted with the decision of legal controversies, which can be said to possess the qualifications of CONSTITUTIONAL independence and impartiality: they all of them are shackled by party, or influenced by dependence; and the measure of justice is not the law of the land, but some other measure, which is better calculated to keep the judge in commission, or promote the objects of his party.

The English judiciary, from its total independence, either on the crown or the parliament, exhibits the noblest features of dignity, impartiality and ability that ever adorned any human institution. The splendor of the monarch, the riches and power of the nobles, the influence and violence of the commons, can never warp the course of justice. In this lies the true equality of British subjects, that great and small, all classes and conditions of men, are assured of having the laws impartially executed. Every man is certain, that justice will be done; and other equality is savage nature, the cheat-word of modern reformers and ambitious knaves. What is the liberty and equality of France? does it consist in the majesty of her laws, and in the steady and upright execution of them between man and man, according to the professed principles of the constitution? Happy indeed for France and for mankind, were this the fruit of her revolution; but France enjoys equality and it is the only equality, which is really intended by one half of its clamorous advocates, namely the equal rights of slaves. Despotism produces the equality of men, it makes all but the despots equal in misery, in contempt, in poverty, in servitude. Lawful government maintains equality of rights; it leaves to all its citizens the liberty of acquiring unequal fame, property, honors, and advantages, by the just and laudable competitions of personal industry, genius and patriotism; and it secures, by the impartiality of its juridical establishments, to all men, the enjoyment of those blessings, either of property or priviledge, which have been thus acquired. Any other liberty or equality than this, is equally opposed to the order of Providence, and the happiness of man.

A work entirely new, original, and highly interesting; embellished with a Portrait of the head of WILLIAM PENN, and a new Map of Pennsylvania, New-Jersey, Maryland, and the State of Delaware, and parts adjacent.

IN this publication are exhibited the remarkable rise, happy progress and extraordinary prosperity of that province, till near the time of the declared independency of the United States of America; effected by such uncommon and pacific means such singular, just and prudent policy, as appear no where in the history of nations, to have so generally, and so extensively prevailed, in any other country, to an equal degree of advancement, importance, and felicity of the people, and so generally to have excited the admiration of all observers, as in the flourishing and happy state of the provinces of Pennsylvania:—proper to be known and remembered by all those, who wish to be informed in the extraordinary melioration of this country, and in the means of rendering the inhabitants so happy and prosperous in former time; as well as an egregious example for posterity and surrounding states to imitate and improve upon, &c.

BOSTON, April 9.

TRUXTON FOREVER!

On Sunday night arrived sloop Phenix, capt. Doane, 17 days from Antigua. Two days before he sailed, a vessel, in 24 hours from St. Kitt's arrived, the captain of which informed him, that he there saw a French privateer schooner of 18 guns, and 150 men which was sent in by commodore Truxton. That officer had sailed from St. Kitts on the 10th of March, in the Constellation, in company with the Insurgent. They separated as they approached, and when they came in full sight of that island, (agreeably to a plan concerted) they both appeared to bear up for port—the one under French colours, the other under American. They soon met, and affected a very furious combat. The French on shore, deceived by these appearances, hastened the sailing of the above mentioned privateer to aid their countrymen. She came out accordingly, and did not discover the deception till too late. 18 shot were fired at her, however, before she was brought too. Captain Doane, (our informant) speaks with confidence of the correctness of the intelligence; says he had a long conversation with the captain from St. Kitts, as had others at Antigua, where the news was credited.

The Constitution frigate was laying at Antigua, in order to have her foremast fished. She had not captured any thing.

Gen. CHAMPIONET promises a purgation to Rome, after he has finished with Naples.

Three Americans were arrested at Paris on the 2d of January, and sent to the Temple.

The French papers say, two English frigates, with several transports, having on board 3000 Neapolitan troops, got aground, and were taken near Naples.

The French Minister at Hamburg, has ceased his functions in consequence of the refusal to liberate TANDY, &c.

The French Deputies at Rastadt have demanded of the German Plenipo's, that the Emperor cause the the Russians to retreat from his territory, otherwise they should consider it a violation of its neutrality, and all parties as returning to the same situation as before the signing of the preliminaries of Peace.

It is said Lord NELSON took 70 Genoese vessels at Leghorn.

French papers agree in the insurrection at Cairo—and add many instances of Arabian hostility.

A London paper of January 18, says, the late demand of the French Deputies at Rastadt has resulted in a declaration of war by Prussia and Austria against France.

The French Journalists say, they give implicit credit to news of the embarkation of 100,000 Turks at Adrianople to act against the French in concert with the Pacha of Damas.

FRENCH CRUELTY.

The ship Ocean, of this port, mounting 22 guns, and 80 men, after a gallant defence, has been taken, off the Havanna, by four French privateers, and every man of her crew cruelly murdered in cold blood.

The motives of Coxe for recommending M'Kean, on the score of his zeal for independence, are not so deeply veiled as some have imagined. A more indefatigable office-hunter is not to be found; and this is a case, in which, though he may reap no laurels of honor, yet he may derive from the gratitude of his new master, that profit, which, now that he has passed the hot meridian of youth, he has wisely learnt to prefer to barren honors and to empty crowns.

It is very much to be apprehended that the result of the census to ensue the present year, will throw a decided preponderancy into the scale of southern politics. Then the sanguine visions of inveterate Democracy may be realized in a division of the Union and a civil war. Indeed, so confident do they seem on this issue, that it is already spoken of as an extant topic of discussion. This result, which would be fairly attributable to the principles of modern republicanism, is not at all foreign to its character. To prey in rage, upon itself for want of a foreign enemy, has long been its direful curse.

The statement re-published from an Eastern paper of the resolution of the President, to raise an additional force for the defence of the country, we believe may be relied on.

COMMUNICATIONS.

IF there be one cavern of Tartarus more intensely excruciating than the rest, it is surely the destined scene of expiation to those villains who continue to abet the designs of France upon this country; but since over the allotted purgation of the Hereafter, we have as little control as they, it behoves us, here, to heap such judgments as we can, upon the heads of wretches, who unceasingly watch for our destruction, and, most assuredly will not long watch in vain, unless some higher degree of virtuous abhorrence against these tygers of society, can be brought speedily into action.

The French faction in America (however we may deceive ourselves by delusive lines of distinction in favor of our countrymen) are composed of materials as inflammable and deleterious, as those of the original French revolutionists themselves; nor do they want any thing but a form and pressure to commence the holy work in practice, which by daily lessons they inculcate in theory. For this they look in a primary degree, to the election of Fouquier Tinville. That they look to it, justly, as a very essential step in the furtherance of their designs, can be doubted by no man who reflects for a moment on the actively daring spirit, of this audacious and tyrannical demagogue. That he would very speedily bring to pass a co-operation on the part of Pennsylvania, along with the land of slaves in Giles's holy scheme of dismembering the Union, must be, I think, a matter of very little question to any one who reflects on the violent and unprincipled ambition by which Fouquier has ever been animated. What incentives would he find to remain subordinate to the general supremacy? Fiat rex si ruat cælum, he would say, and the herd of Asses who follow and obey in his train would all bray amen. Let us then by timely activity, and by a persevering display of abhorrence at principles and conduct, designed for our ruin, prostrate so potent a fabric of mischief, ere yet the top-stone be put to it, and our liberties with an useless groan, flee indignant to the shades.

MR. FENNO,

HAVING read in your paper of Saturday evening, a publication of several persons, stiling themselves a Committee of Correspondence to circulate the intelligence of the important selection of Thomas M'Kean for the office of Governor at the ensuing election, I was led to make some enquiries respecting the characters of the persons composing this committee, and am informed that the Tench Coxe therein mentioned, is the identical Tench Coxe who adhered to the British cause during the American revolution.

That the Alexander I Dallas, therein named, is the very identical secretary of this commonwealth, of whom Fauchet, the French minister, in his dispatches to this government, during the western insurrection, makes the following honorable mention.

"Of all governors whose duty it was to appear at the head of the requisitions, the governor of Pennsylvania alone enjoyed the name of Republican: his opinion of the secretary of the treasury and of his systems was known to be unfavorable. The secretary of this state possessed great influence in the Popular Society of Philadelphia, which in its turn influenced those of other states; of course he merited attention. It appears therefore that these men with others unknown to me, all having without doubt Randolph at their head, were balancing to decide on their party. Two or three days before the proclamation was published and of course before the cabinet had resolved on its measures, Mr. Randolph came to see me with an air of great eagerness, and made to me the overtures of which I have given you an account in my No. 6. Thus with some thousands of dollars the Republic could have decided on civil war or on peace! Thus the consciences of the pretended patriots of America have already their prices? It is very true that the certainty of these conclusions, painful to be drawn, will forever exist in our archives! What will be the old age of this government, if it is thus early decrepid!"

"As soon as it was decided that the French Republic purchased no men to do their duty, there were to be seen individuals, about whose conduct the government could at least form uneasy conjectures, giving themselves up with a scandalous ostentation to its views, and even seconding its declarations. The Popular Societies soon emitted resolutions stamped with the same spirit, and who, although they may have been advised by love of order, might nevertheless have omitted, or utterred them with less solemnity. Then were seen coming from the very men whom we had been accustomed to regard as having little friendship for the system of the treasurer, harangues without end, in order to give a new direction to the public mind. The militia, however, manifest some repugnance, particularly in Pennsylvania, for the service to which they were called.—Several officers resign; at last by excursions or harrangues, incomplete requisitions are obtained, and scattered volunteer corps from different parts make up the deficiency. How much more interesting, than the changeable men whom I have painted above, were those plain citizens who answered the solicitations which were made to them to join the volunteers."

As to the remainder of the committeemen, I leave their biography to other hands, as I conceive, from certain circumstances, they had not an equal share in the production; thus, for instance, the following extract was exclusively the production of the laurelled Tench: "There is scarcely a page of the American revolutionary history that does not yield some testimony of his active and efficient patriotism." And the clause following, viz. "The talents and dispositions of Mr. Ross are devoted to the advancement of a political system which in our opinion can only be established on the ruins of the Federal Government", must have been written by that same secretary whose assistance to destroy the constitution of the United States could not be procured without money.

A VILLAIN UN-HANGED.

The following Dublin article was published some days since in most of our Gazettes.

January 22.

Another mail from Dublin arrived this morning by which we have received papers and letters of the 16th and 18th inst.

In the county of Clare, it appears an engagement has taken place between the insurgents and the military; for the Dublin Journal says, "By the latest accounts from Inniss, we learn that troops have marched from Limerick against the insurgents in that neighbourhood; a short conflict took place, in which the rebels were totally routed and dispersed: several of their leaders have been taken, among others the infamous Burke, who was expelled the college of Dublin for blasphemy; and O'Gorman, who, at the instigation of the editor of The Press, engaged last March in the plan to assassinate Mr. Macartney, and was for that and other crimes expelled the college. Burke has been hanged at Ennis; O'Gorman is in Limerick goal. The country is nearly quieted by this timely interference of the military power."

[We suspected at the time that the person of Burke (or Burk, as he sometimes calls himself) so circumstantially stated therein to have been executed, would be recognized in the Editor of a Democratic newspaper at New-York; and from a knowledge of the man's stupidity, expected that he would identify himself. We have not been disappointed: See his own words. What degree of credit ought to be given to a man, who can declare with composure that he has not been hanged, we leave the reader to decide: That he has been actually hanged, is not the less probable on the account. On one point, however, all decent people must agree, that whether he has or has not been hanged, at any time past, it is high time he were.]

From the Argus.

"The Same Gentleman."

We may judge of the degree of credit due to the London prints, from an inspection of the accounts detailed in them concerning Ireland; in speaking on the late transactions there, we delivered an opinion, that the insurrection said to have taken place, was much exaggerated by the tools of government, to promote their designs; we are now fully convinced of it, when we see false names published as leaders of the insurrection. Mr. John Burke is stated to have been hanged at a place called Ennis; this same gentleman is at present in this country, and has probably read the account of his being taken and and executed; our readers will perceive how liable they are to be imposed upon by the lies and calumnies which fill the columns of the venal prints of Britain.

[A wretch who can quote an account of his expulsion from a seminary of learning for Blaspheming his Maker, without attempting to controvert it, and a detail of his having been hanged, as the due reward of his infamous courses, merely for the pleasure of calling himself a Gentleman, or of citing an evidence of the incorrectness of newspapers,—will readily be allowed a fit agent to stir up the populace against their government, and to set the poor and idle, like himself, at loggerheads with those, who, by honest industry, have acquired those comforts of life, which attract the jealousy of such lawless freebooters.

We have a villain here of exactly the same description of character, and another wretch very little better has just commenced his career at New-York. Are such the fountains of our republicanism? are such the literati of our country? through such hands must the information of the community pass? One might have thought we had fallen so low in this regard, as to preclude new disgraces. But it was not enough, that a fellow who had escaped from Newgate and the pillory, should print a newspaper, and call it the Merchant's Advertiser, or that another fellow, contriving to fly from irons and a dungeon in Britain, should print another newspaper, in the very capital, under a Republican government, and call it the exclusive fountain of Republicanism:—no, no; all this was not enough. Other Illuminators must be imported, more effectively to inculcate upon the susceptible simplicity of the country, the tenets of pure and undefiled Republicanism. A fellow whose nickname had become the synonime of every thing disgraceful, every thing opprobrious, flying from the pursuit of justice, and another expelled the College for Blaspheming the Most High, must be added to the splendid galaxy of REPUBLICAN WORTHIES.

Thus are we, the free and enlightened people of America, taught lessons in government, by the refuse of British jails, dungeons and jibbets—thus are men qualified by long experience of a severe despotism (and that government is worthless, which to such wretches is not despotic) to assume the station of centinels at the vestibule of the temple of liberty.]

One Hundred Dollars Reward.

RAN away from the subscriber this day, at noon, two mulatto house Servants, viz Ned, but commonly called Edward among his companions, well known as the subscriber's coachman and waiting man for several years in this city and in New-York—he is a tall strait made mulatto with a large bushy head of hair, about 32 years of age, has a low forehead, with small eyes, a sullen dark look and is much inclined to be abrupt and insolent, one of his legs something smaller than the other from a fracture in his youth; he generally wears a brown cloth coatee with red cuffs and cape and red edging, or fustian with red cuffs and cape; had on when he went away an old forest cloth surtout, mix'd brown and yellow, and has a box coat of light colored drab, with red and white livery lace, but as I do not know what other clothes he had on, may change his dress.

Nelly, calling herself Wife to the before named Ned, she is much above the middle stature, strait made with falling shoulders, has a remarkable ferocious countenance and is very passionate, quarrelsome, and noisy, she is rather a fair mulatto—has lost one or two of her front teeth, which she supplies with wax, and has a large scar between her shoulders occasioned by a blister; she is about forty five years of age, has a very masculine air in her walk, she carried away with her several gowns of different colored cotton; the above reward will be given for apprehending and securing them in any Jail in the United States and giving notice to the subscriber; or fifty dollars for securing either of them.——All persons are cautioned against harboring, entertaining, or concealing the above servants or either of them; and all masters of vessels and others are warned against carrying them from the United States,
